SERIOUS ACCIDENT .- Mat. Kramer, farmer living at Four Mile, met with a very serious accident this morning. He reached the city at an early bour with a wagon load of truck, and before 9 o'clock was drunk clean through. While in this condition he was helped on his wagon, and, when crossing the gutter at Harris and Isabella streets, was jolted off. The hind wheel of the vehicle passed over his head, shaving off the right ear, cutting a very severe gash over the right eye and tearing off a portion of the scalp. He was picked up from the street in an insensible condition, and it was for a time thought that he was dead. Messengers were dispatched in every direction for physicians, and in less than ten minutes four were on the spot; also two midwives came rushing to the scene, willing to render all the assistance possible. After the wounds were dressed he was placed in the wagon and a physician accompanied him home.

FASHIONABLE FRAUDS .- "That is where Frances.—"That is where the beautiful Mrs. Blank, of Mobile, gets her elegant costumes," I remarked to a friend, as we passed a well-known establishment in University Place. "There!" exclaimed she. "Why, she declared to us all that all her dresses, and, in truth everything she wears comes direct from Paris! That certainly was a Parisian robe she got this spring, I mean the pale, sheen green silk covered with lace, looped with pink hyacinth sprays, with jewery in conch shell ornaments to match the flowers. She said her husband paid $1,000 cash to have the jewels and costumes imported."

"Well, dear," I answered, soothingly, happen to know from whence came every article composing the costume, and not one was imported. The silk itself was of American manufacture, the lace was made by a New York establishment, the exquisite flowers were created to order in Union Square, and even the jewelry which you thought, and perhaps she herself fancied, was so expensive, was created in this, our country. You thought it a real conch shell, but, dear, the beautiful set—chain, pendant, bracelet and ear-rings in floral design were of the Leusaic, a most perfect imita-tion of real conch shell, now affected by ladies of fashion who can wear the delicate pink tint to advantage."
"But Mrs. Blank always appears well dressed, even if she does wear shams."

"Yes, but her few shams are such that only experts can detect them. Her diamonds are of the purest water, her laces are real; her silks are superb, even if manufactured here; her gold is real and solid, and it is only the few fancy articles for evening wear that she buys in imitation, and these are always the perfection of art. The secret s-she knows appropriately; she wears a plain black silk dress to a funeral, a handsome silk to din-ner, and a lace robe to an evening enter-tainment, while for home her costumes are neat, simple and most becoming. Being always appropriately arrayed, she feels thoroughly comfortable, and every lady understands the feeling of self-possession and inward satisfaction that the fact of being suitably attired gives."-[New York Letter.

RIGHTS OF STREET-CAR PASSENGERS.—The suit of Mrs. S. A. Jamison against the San Jose & Santa Clara Street Reilroad Company, to recover $10,000 for damages for injuries alleged to have been sustained while juries alleged to have been sustained while in the cars of the Company as a passenger, resulted in the jury awarding her $300, which throws the costs on the defendant. The case was a peculiar one. The Company's track crosses the city bridge over the Guadelupe Creek. The bridge needed ranking and while these researches. repairs, and while these were going on a emporary foot bridge was set up to accommodate passengers who were necessitated to change cars, and, to do so, cross the bridge. It was after dark and she started across, when a stick of timber near the path is said to have tipped her up, and she fell ten or twelve feet into the creek-bed. The question to be decided was whether she was a passenger or not at the time. - [San Francisco Call.

A VALUABLE SUGGESTION .- To find out whether a garden is planted or not a paper gives the following rule: "If one forgets whether beds are planted or not, a good way to tell is to turn a stray cat into the way to tell is to tunt a stray cat the cat garden.
